Seacology Island Scholar

Seacology is an international environmental not for profit organization that focuses on saving endangered species, habitats and cultures of islands throughout the world. Launching a new award, Seacology UK's Island Scholar Award, students from UK senior schools were encouraged to join the cause and help protect the threatened biodiversity of global island communities via designing and implementing an awareness-raising plan around this project.

We are pleased that Tamara, a senior at Southbank Westminster, took on the challenge when posted by Philomena Clancy, Director of CAS, and has been named Seacology UK's 2010/11 Island Scholar. Over the next year, Tamara will be raising awareness about the environmental and livelihood needs of the isolated community on Guadalupe Island in Mexico.
